US ADITAZZ company visited Wanda Business Planning Institute

Published: 2017-05-25 Author: Tian Yi

On May 25, Deepak Aatresh, CEO of ADITAZZ, a Silicon Valley innovative high-tech company, together with Zigmund Rubel and Eric Shen, visited Wanda's Business Planning Institute. The two parties focused on subjects relating to Wanda's new healthcare practice and their future hospital construction needs. Zigmund Rubel and Eric Shen presented ADITAZZ's concept of "Operational Modeling and Optimization" as well as "Building As A Product" project delivery method in responding to Wanda's future needs.

Wanda's Business Planning Institute Vice President, Li Hao, hosted the meeting. Other attendees included staff from Wanda Commercial Real Estate Information Management Department, Healthcare Department, and Business Planning Department. Mr. Li also introduced Wanda's importance in bringing scale, format, project management, and business operations into the Chinese real estate and building industries.

ADITAZZ specializes three major technologies: 1) operational simulation and optimization, 2) intelligent automated design and planning, 3) manufactured building products. ADITAZZ utilizes knowledge and experience of digital, intelligent design tools, automated large amount of works that are traditionally manual, as well as bringing benefits with scale and integration. Participants from both parties conducted in-depth discussions and exchanges on the work processes and features of ADITAZZ's previous successful projects and cases.

Finally, Mr. Li thanks ADITAZZ for its visit and share of knowledge. Mr. Li also affirmed ADITAZZ's various innovative concepts, and indicated both parties will have a substantive collaboration in Wanda's future hospital projects.
